In just five days, Hurricane Harvey unleashed one trillion gallons of water on the Houston area — equivalent to the amount rushing over Niagara Falls in a two-week period. The unprecedented rain has destroyed more than 100,000 Houston homes and upended the lives of millions of people, including thousands of men and women at the heart of American fuel and petrochemical manufacturing. Roughly 600,000 people are expected file for government assistance in the aftermath of the storm, as places like Baytown, Beaumont, Corpus Christi and Three Rivers — communities this industry has called home for decades — are underwater. AFPM member companies have taken immediate action at their facilities and in their communities, many establishing advanced crisis centers to support employees and help safely meet the needs of communities struggling to navigate the impacts of this once-in-a-thousand-years storm. Beyond donating millions of dollars to the Red Cross and other humanitarian organizations, AFPM member companies are responding with aid in countless ways, including:

- Coordinating directly with FEMA and other government agencies;
- Pumping water out of flooding neighborhoods;
- Arranging short- and long-term housing for employees;
- Underwriting medical expenses;
- Company engineers using their expertise to work with city officials to restore tap water to homes; Coordinating rental vehicles for employees whose vehicles were damaged/lost;
- Deploying company maintenance crews to employee homes to tackle clean-up and repairs; and
- Bringing convoys into affected areas and contributing supplies.

Beyond the aid coordinated by companies, employees are opening their homes to provide shelter for one another and their families, and colleague-to-colleague financial support is pouring into foundations established to help those impacted by the storm. As member-company employees and their families and friends throughout their Houston-area communities navigate the long process of rebuilding after the storm, they will do so with the continued support of the industry.

Erin Ailworth
@ailworth

Follow

Harvey aid via cos: When Beaumont's H2O service failed, @exxonmobil used 36 helos to deliver H2O to employees & fams wsj.com/articles/harve ...

4:33 PM - 7 Sep 2017

19 Retweets 26 Likes

4 19 26

Chevron Phillips
@chevronphillips

Following

CPChem donated $10,000 in PPE to @SecondBaytown to support 1,000 volunteers in Baytown to help clean flooded homes #TexasStrong

5:19 PM - 6 Sep 2017

6 Retweets 15 Likes

6 15

BP America
@BP_America

Following

BP continues to provide 24/7 support to any #Houston employee impacted by #Harvey.

10:00 AM - 6 Sep 2017

29 Retweets 68 Likes

1 29 68

LyondellBasell
@LyondellBasell

Following

Our #ChannelviewTX employees prepared meals for the Rio Villa community who experienced severe flooding during #Harvey. #LYBGivesBack

11:22 AM - 5 Sep 2017

2 Retweets 16 Likes

2 16

Marathon Petroleum
@MarathonPetroCo
Following

MPC donates $1 million for Texas storm recovery, will match employee donations ow.ly/BdtG30eRAJf #HarveyResponse

Valero Energy
@ValeroEnergy
Following

Our Relief Team will distribute free gasoline in the Coastal Bend area tomorrow AM. Check back for location, bring a can & get up to 5 gals.

7:00 PM - 1 Sep 2017

46 Retweets 58 Likes

5 46 58

7:35 AM - 2 Sep 2017

56 Retweets 99 Likes

Print as PDF:

Topics

Workforce, Economy, & Manufacturing

Employees

Communities

Tags

Hurricane

Phillips 66

Communities