
The AFPM National Occupational and Process Safety Conference (NSC) features a variety of safety practices, programs, and roundtable discussions to improve safety performance at refineries and petrochemical facilities. The Conference also brings in a wide range of contractor safety leads, company trainers, and other disciplines such as human performance, emergency response, and wireless technology. Networking and knowledge sharing are integrated with workshops, poster sessions, and panel discussions with the goal of sharing good practices, new technologies, and timely topics across multiple safety disciplines.
